

CFAR's Healthcare Practice

CFAR has worked with organizations across the healthcare ecology for thirty years. It's been our privilege to support some of the nation's leading academic medical centers, research institutes, health systems, physician groups, and post-acute care systems—as well as many of the professional societies and certifying boards that govern their respective fields in medicine, dentistry, nursing and other clinical arenas. We also work with private, entrepreneurial healthcare businesses focused on disruptive innovations that increase value and improve quality and access to care.

Our work is focused on issues of strategy, cultural change, collaboration and governance. We also support leadership transitions and succession. We have a growing practice focused on Coaching 2.0, where we combine coaching and project work linked to mission-critical performance needs to re-orient the leader, the team, and the ways in which they work together to make success possible.

CFAR partners with leaders to help them achieve their goals, by improving organizational effectiveness, clinical performance, governance, quality, safety, research, and training the next generation of providers. We understand the complex stakeholder environments of healthcare organizations, and are skilled at fostering the engagement needed to make change happen—and to make it stick. In sum, we work with our clients to...

- ▶ Set direction and put strategy into action quickly.
- ▶ Advance organizational and cultural change and ready your culture for population health.
- ▶ Revitalize governance and strengthen boards.
- ▶ Turn leadership transitions into opportunities for growth.
- ▶ Promote effective interprofessional and team collaboration.
- ▶ Adapt training and education to develop the next generation of healthcare providers.
- ▶ Expand medical research capacity.
